“Dating is stupid. I suggest you don’t do it.”

As Valentine’s Day fast approaches, The 90-Day Contract: A Dating Solution offers a long overdue alternative approach to meeting, greeting, and all that follows

*Blisteringly funny and original. I wish I’d come up with the idea! It’s genius!
Absolutely clever, and looks at dating in a whole new way. People will love this book!*

~ Stephen Meier

Phoenix, AZ – Just imagine. A world where you never break up again but simply cancel or renew. Imagine no more dating horror stories or ridiculous games. Imagine no more uncertainty, vagueness, or relationship failures. Imagine a better way to date, a new way to approach relationships that will help everyone create a better dating experience.

As Damon Alton, author of the newly released The 90-Day Contract: A Dating Solution says, “I know I am not the only one who’s ever uttered the words ‘Dating sucks.’” Out of sheer desperation after countless communication foibles and difficult break-ups, Damon created his new approach to dating that has revolutionized the experience for the better – the 90-day contract is an alternative to the traditional model of dating that makes dating fun again.

Damon comments, “We have contracts for everything else, including our jobs, cell phones, mortgages, and gym memberships. Why should relationships be any different?” But readers shouldn’t be alarmed – this contract doesn’t require an attorney or even any paperwork. Instead, it’s based on mutual understanding and a different approach from the get-go that removes the emotionally charged elements that so often complicate dating, replacing them with humor, honesty, and mutual goodwill, regardless of the eventual outcome. Contracts aren’t fun, notes Damon, “but 90-day contracts are.”

The author adds, “The 90-Day Contract is a funny and unique approach to dating that changes the way we interact and creates an opportunity to succeed in a relationship or amicably move on without frustration or guilt. Stop dating and try a 90-day contract.”
